Marlene believes her habitat is haunted. After hearing a blood curdling scream the penguins come to investigate. Shortly after, the lemurs come in and King Julien does a ritualistic dance accompanied by a song to appease the sky spirits and remove the spirits. The penguins leave Marlene alone with the lemurs.

A popular Universal film of the late 1930s was Destry Rides Again (1939), starring James Stewart as Destry and Marlene Dietrich in her comeback role after leaving Paramount. By the early 1940s, the company was concentrating on lower-budget productions that were the company's main staple: westerns, melodramas, serials and sequels to the studio's horror pictures, the latter now solely B pictures.
